

Dr. Michael Kramer is an associate professor of epidemiology at Emory University, and the Director of the Emory Maternal and Child Health Center of Excellence. With interests at the intersection of social epidemiology, spatial epidemiology, and maternal and child health, he is particularly focused on how the social and historical construction of place affects population health and population health equity. He teaches courses in advanced methods in social epidemiology and in spatial epidemiology.